GOVERNOR LORD

Has Decided to Not Interfere in the Porter Case.

THE CURRY COUNTY FEUD.

State Aid May Be Invoked to Preserve Order at Chetco.

At the present writing Governor Lord had not found sufficient facts to authorize him to interfere in the Kelsey Porter hanging. He has spent the past few days examining papers connected with the case, and if the killing involved only the young man with whom Porter had some difficulty the governor would allow some leniency. But the trial was for killing the father, and there is still the further crime of killing the mother under identically the same circumstances, which is not explained away by any facts before the governor.

The case will be left open to the last hour to hear and consider any new light that can be thrown upon a crime which practically amounts to killing a whole family.

There are two vacancies in the Oregon legislature caused by the death of Hons. J. H. Kruse, People's, and Dr. T. J. Lee, Democrat.

THE CHETCO FEUD.

L. J. Adams, of Silverton, brother-in-law of "Curry" Coolidge, killed by the Van Pelt in Curry county, Thursday, was in Salem yesterday and told Governor Lord of the condition of affairs in Curry county, preparatory to asking for state aid, which he thinks will soon have to be invoked. Mr. Adams brought with him two dispatches received yesterday by A. L. Coolidge, at Silverton, from a private citizen at Chetco. One said: "The Van Pelt is fortified in their house with 14 rifles. Indians and half breeds are coming from California as reinforcements. They refuse to surrender. Four of the tribe are under guard; captured last night. Streets and roads patrolled by true and trusty men."

Another dispatch says: "Following criminals have escaped: Charles Thomas, Jr., and Thomas, sr., William Lincoln and Robert Van Pelt, and E. E. Hughes. Make known everywhere."

Mr. Adams has property interests at Chetco, and desires protection. Governor Lord is ready to furnish state aid and only wants information from local authorities that they are unable to preserve law and order.

Articles of Incorporation of the Oregon Wood Company, of Portland, were today filed in the office of the Secretary of State. The object of the corporation is to flume cord wood into the Columbia river from the mountains of Columbia county making use of the waters of what is known as Milton Creek near St. Helens.

WORK SUSPENDED.

Dam Washes Out and Progress of Flax Industry Delayed.

The flax industry work has been suspended for a few days by reason of the dam washing out, Tuesday night. The high water of the past week has done considerable damage along its course, the most unexpected of which was the washing away of the dam in North Mill creek, thus shutting off the flax mill from its water supply and making it necessary to suspend operations indefinitely.

Temporary repairs will be made at once that the work of preparing the flax fibre for shipment may not be delayed. It will not be possible to make substantial or permanent repairs until the water has subsided several feet.

The work of separating the fibre from the straw has been prosecuted for several weeks with satisfactory results. A force of ten men has been employed. Only one man has been engaged at the scutching mill and the result of a day's work average about 15 pounds of fibre.

None of the fibre has yet been shipped, but as soon as there is a sufficient quantity to constitute a shipment the same will be duly consigned to eastern parties.

OREGON TURKEYS.

Local Raisers Will Be Obligated To Compete With the East.

With Thanksgiving but a week distant, the Salem poultry markets are especially noticeable from the fact there is scarcely a turkey to be seen. Inquiry elicited the information that Willamette Valley raisers ask too much for their turkeys. A Salem buyer furnishes the following statement of the condition of the market.

The time has come at last when the Oregon turkey raiser must compete with his neighbor over in the Mississippi valley. Yet we have the advantage of the cost of transportation from there.

Kansas City has notified the wholesale dealers of the Pacific coast that they will furnish dressed turkeys, P. O. B. cars, Kansas City, 7 cents per pound, Wells, Fargo Express company say they will lay them down here for 5 cents per pound, making total cost of turkeys to the wholesale merchant 12 cents per pound.

Other kinds of poultry is also offered at about the same rates and they are anxious to secure orders in this part of the country.

The Oregon turkey raiser should sell their birds whenever they are suitable for market, and not under take to sell them all at once on some particular holiday there is more or less turkey used at all times of the year, and especially in the winter.

A RAD ROAD.—Considerable complaint is coming in about the road to the reform school being badly flooded. In some places the water is knee deep.

ANOTHER STANFORD LETTER.

Stanford Hopeful of Defeating Berkeley in the Big Thanksgiving Game.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 14, 1897.

Mid-semester examinations have come and gone, leaving in their path varied recollections of joy or painful memories of hours well spent in "plugging" or agonizing regret for wasted time and unutilized opportunity. Now you can walk the quad without hearing everyone from Euclid's sweetest dode to Roble's most queenly dame talking of "crumming" and "plugging" and "stuffing." No more do you hear of "cold throw downs" and "dead flunks" nor do the blushing coeds murmur of "most awfully agonizing mathematical examinations" or of "sweetly delicious snaps"; instead, the only topics of conversation now are: Daley's sixty yard run, Cotton's center drive, Chester's goal kicks and other entertaining items of football prowess.

With the big game less than two weeks off, all is snap and dash and push and hustle and hurry of preparation. The Glee club, the Mandolin club, the orchestra, the band, the farce, one, all are in earnest practice for their several parts in the entertainment of the great day and night. Men with subtle brains and abnormal imaginations are devising new yells; long haired poets are searching in the cavernous depths of their skulls for new foot-ball poems, and wild-eyed composers are nightly disturbing the sleep of the exhausted "dig" in their efforts to set those poems to music. Even the big Fraternity mastiff has caught the "Stanford spirit" and will not allow anything blue or gold on the campus while he howls with delight at anything red, from stockings to red dye.

Yesterday the varsity's long record of victories was broken by the Reliance team, but that only increases the interest in the big game, only raises Berkeley's hopes and in no way casts down our own.

The U. C. team has gone to Del Monte for a two weeks sequester, and rumor has it, are doing great things for their colors. Our team will probably spend a week in some quiet resort, tucked away from the cares of this world with its digging and worry, in secret practice. Then we will all assemble in the gym, on the bleachers, or in "Euclid's classic halls" and learn the football songs, practice the new yells and stir up our enthusiasm, a super-heated cardinal flood with which to submerge the Berkeleyites on Nov. 25th. So much for football, now for other things.

A truthful poet has said:
"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts above."

According to the almanac this is winter, but if you were to forget the month, you would write April and think no more of it. Mother Earth has donned her freshest springtime robe of green and the sky's bright, cloud-freckled face beams loving smiles of mellow sunlight day by day. It is heaven to the "Oregon Delegation" to ride a bicycle along a sunlit, dusty road, to see the street sprinkler hard at work and to leave your faithful umbrella broken in the garret, while from home comes the news of cloud and mud and rainy days. But time flies on and studies never wait. Pleasures cloy, but lectures never sate. One long round of cram, the student's life. Full of joy and full of strife.

Thus since time is short and labor long,
Here the bard will sadly leave his song,
Hoping when the game is won and Berkeley faint,
And the city boasts a coat of cardinal paint,
Then again his song to wildly swell
And of joy and victory to tell.
RALPH A. WATSON.

W. H. JOY EXONERATED.

The Former Accountant Makes a Statement of Alleged Shortages.

About 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, the case instituted against W. H. Joy, former accountant for the Salem Labor Exchange, on the charge of larceny by bailor, was concluded and the jury returned a verdict within five minutes after leaving the court room, declaring Mr. Joy not guilty. The many friends of Mr. Joy in this city claim a great injustice has been done him and even assert that the case was none other than that of malicious prosecution.

MR. JOY'S STATEMENT.

Defendant was seen this morning, and claims this is all malicious prosecution and is only instituted in order to injure him. In the first place he says the charge of larceny of a quarter of beef is over a year old, and thinks it strange that the matter should have been left so long without prosecution. Furthermore, he says the plaintiffs made no reference to that charge at the trial, studiously avoiding the subject.

In regard to the charge of his abstracting $40 in checks, Mr. Joy says, that when the checks came from the head office the numbers on the checks and stubs in our book did not correspond. This Mr. Joy says made things look bad, but insists that those checks were used with the knowledge of the directors. He also claims that $700 worth of checks were lost, strayed or stolen last year, and that he sold his home to make that amount good to the exchange.
